• Body Language and Personal Image Training

Most of our work life and private life passes by communicating. People use three different instruments in communication. These are the words, phraseology and body language. However, contrary to popular belief, body language is the most important one. 10% of our communication is made by words, 30% by phraseology and 60% by the body language. Therefore, for having good communication skills, we have to use our body language and read other people's body language correctly.

In this training, it is intended to make the participants dominate their body languages and establish better communications in addition to having more effective, professional and charismatic personal images.

Branding Consultancy

• Branding Consultancy

Brand is cash and managed with knowledge. In the recent years, the importance and necessity of being a "brand" has emerged in the industrial markets. Of course, intensity of competition and increasing expectations of the customers are the fundamental rationale behind this requirement. Brand is not only the name and logo of the product. Brand is the total of values in the consumer's mind. Brand value hierarchy covers determination of the "relation value" by combining the rational values related to the product and service with the rational and emotional values related to the brand. Reaching the total of these values is possible by making the values consistent with each other internally and externally, and with continuous and holistic marketing and communication activities. Accordingly, it is of great importance that the institutions create brand projections for the future by determining brand perception of the stakeholders accumulated from the past to present.
